
Key report highlights

This information will appear as a separate item in your 'Report Profile' on CorporateRegister.com It will also be available after the CRRA'12 is concluded, so don't refer to the CRRA, instead offer a quick introduction to your report, to encourage our users to read it.

We suggest the entire text should be 200-400 words but you may use as few or as many words as you wish.

Name of Report

Background (Any information the reader might find useful when reading the report – developments in the sector, a recent merger or divestment for example, or points which make this an interesting and valuable report)

Content (the scope of the report – reporting period, what is included and what is not)

Communications (Any points which make the report communication more effective, such as a summary, website, extra data, guidelines used, stakeholder feedback used etc)

Credibility (What makes this a serious report which users should take time to read – is the information comparable from year to year, or against other companies; does it include information from third parties, such as an assurance statement or commentary etc)

Other information (Any points you wish to add)